

"BUTTS, BAYONETS, BULLETS!" THE ORDER.

Cars Running at Albany Packed with Troops, Who Get Their Orders from Their Chief.

Bitter Feeling Aroused by Shooting of Two Leading Citizens by Soldiers of Twenty-third Regiment.

(Special to The Evening World.)
ALBANY, May 17.—The first car left the Quail street depot at 10 o'clock today. It was quickly followed by others. Every car was more heavily guarded by soldiers and Plinkerton men than before.

The militia kept the people moving and there was little demonstration as the cars began to move.

Five companies of the Twenty-third Regiment—B, C, D, G and H—under command of Major Case were marched down to the Quail street barn from Beaverwyck Park shortly after 9 o'clock, and a few minutes later the Third Brigade Signal Corps, serving as cavalry, trailed up.

In his instructions to the men Major Case said that in case of attack they were to first use the butts of their guns, and as a last resort they were to fire.

John W. McNamara, general manager of the United Traction Company, and Robert C. Pruyn, the President of the company, are both fearful that they may be shot at. The police have heard and those in command of the military have been informed that certain lawless elements have openly said that both of them would be killed. Both of the men are keeping off the street as much as possible and Mr. McNamara is closely guarded when he goes out.

It was 10:15 o'clock before the road began to operate its cars this morning, and then several cars were sent down the hill and up to North Albany. The street corners were rather deserted, but the soldiers in the cars, with their

SOLDIERS DISPERSING A MOB OF STRIKERS AND SYMPATHIZERS.

TERMS OF SETTLEMENT OF ALBANY STRIKE.

All employees are to receive 20 cents per hour.

The Company will treat with a committee of employees whether comprised of union or non-union men.

Of the eight non-union men who were one of the main causes of the strike, four will affiliate with the union and four will be retained as inspectors by the company.

A rule of the union bars inspectors from membership.

loaded guns resting on their knees, watched closely as the corners were passed.

The Second Regiment and the Twenty-third Regiment had thrown out men to guard all the important points, the same as yesterday. On each car that came down the hill was four extra crews, and when the seven cars reached the North Albany barn the extra crews were dropped off.

They were immediately placed on West Albany cars, and shortly after this line of the company began to operate as far west as Quail street. (Continued on page 2.)

which has been a hot bed of trouble, was pretty well cleared of people by the Twenty-third Regiment, and the first car since the strike began was run up the avenue.

The company announces that before midnight every line within the city limit will be in operation, but the word operation of course means that the cars will be running with a soldier guard, but without any fare being rung up for the public is afraid to ride.

ALBANY ANGRY AT THE SHOOTING.

Soldiers of the Twenty-third Are Bitterly Denounced by Citizens.

(Special to The Evening World.)
ALBANY, May 17.—E. Leroy Smith, one of the men shot in the riot on Broadway yesterday afternoon, died in the City Hospital today.

As William J. Walsh, the other man who was shot, died last night, this makes two fatal cases. The riot at the shooting done by Lieut. J. W. Wilson, of Company E, Twenty-third Regiment, and ten of his men.

The shooting will cause a clash between the military and the civil authorities. Representatives of the strikers will ask for the arrest of Lieut. Wilson on the charge of murder. Local sympathy is largely with the strikers, and the police would be glad to attempt to execute warrants for the arrest of officers and members of the Twenty-third Regiment.

Coroner Fritz has promised to make a rigid investigation and says that his verdict will not be influenced by the fact that the shooting was done by uniformed men.

The officers of the Twenty-third Regiment have already made an investigation and have exonerated Lieut. Wilson and the men. Should any attempt to arrest Wilson be made the military authorities will resist and they may go so far as to ask the Governor to declare Albany County under martial law, and thus entirely supersede civil authority.

3,000 Troops at Albany.

The arrival of the Ninth Regiment will make the total number of troops in Albany 3,000. The city is at fever heat, and five more regiments may not be sufficient to preserve the peace.

"Murderers!" is the word hurled at the members of the Twenty-third Regiment as they patrol the streets.

The city is under martial law, although it has not been formally proclaimed. Brig-Gen. Oliver has reiterated through his subordinates his command of two days ago.

"Don't shoot unless you can't help it, when you do shoot, make it count."

The soldiers were more serious in their treatment of the strike than heretofore. The men no longer travel alone but in threes. The temper of the people is the utmost vigilance necessary.

BANKS GUARDED BY THE TROOPS.

(Special to The Evening World.)
ALBANY, May 17.—One effect of the strike has been the flocking to Albany of a great many toughs and crooks. Several robberies were reported today, and merchants demanded better protection than that afforded by the incompetent police force.

A delegation of bankers and leading merchants called on Gen. Oliver and asked that the force of soldiers on State and Pearl streets be increased. In response to their request there were ten troops in front of every bank in the city at 11 o'clock and one in front of the leading business houses.

In two blocks on State street are 174 soldiers, not counting those that stand in groups along the railroad tracks.

GALLANT NINTH LEAVES, 500 STRONG, FOR ALBANY.

March Up Fifth Avenue Loudly Cheered by Crowds—Pathetic Farewells at the Grand Central Station by Mothers, Wives and Sweethearts.

The Ninth Regiment left for Albany today. Five hundred men out of the full quota of 710 had been gathered at the armory since midnight.

Col. William F. Morris was there when the detachment came asking him to get his men together. He at once sent telegrams to his staff officers.

They quickly responded to the call. Some came in cabs and two arrived in evening clothes. One of these was Capt. Winterboth, an old Seventh man, and now inspector of small arms practice of the Ninth.

As soon as the officers arrived the corporals were sent out to hunt for their men. By 6 o'clock 500 men had gathered at the armory and more were arriving every few minutes.

Friends at Depot.

When the train pulled out of the Grand Central station a few minutes after 11 o'clock the crowd in the depot cheered wildly. Sweethearts waved their handkerchiefs, mothers wept.

Soldiers poked their heads out of the windows and shouted farewell. Then the signal was given and the train rolled away to Albany. There will be no stops between New York and the capital.

The five hundred men of the Ninth Regiment who had been called together were formed on the floor of the armory soon after 10 o'clock by Col. Morris. They were armed in various uniform campaign cap and leggings. Each man had his haversack, overcoat, blanket, canteen and cup.

A pushcart filled with ball cartridges was hauled to the center of the armory and the men went up to it in turn and filled their belts, taking forty rounds. In addition to this, 100 rounds were sent with the regiment.

Gen. Butts, commander of the brigade, inspected the men in company with Col. Morris. To an Evening World reporter Gen. Butts said:

Other Regiments Ready.

"I want to call attention to the fine appearance of the men. They are in splendid condition. The Twelfth and Twenty-second, the other regiments of my brigade, are held in readiness to go to Albany if necessary. Of these two the Twenty-second would be the first to be sent, as the Twelfth is not completely offered."

All the officers of the regiment were present except three. These were Maj. George F. Loring, who is out of the city; Lieut. Cecil Lyons, who is in the Philippines on a leave of absence, and Lieut. Ellis, who is ill.

With flying flags and to the time of the drum the Ninth marched gayly down Fifth avenue. Crowds thronged both sides of the street, and the police were busy keeping the roadway clear. The steps of the houses were filled with women and the sidewalks were nearly blocked. From every side came loud cheers.

March on Fifth Avenue.

The men left the armory at 10:45 through the Fifteenth street doorway. There they were greeted with shouts by the crowd that had been waiting since daylight. The regiment proceeded on Fifteenth street to Fifth avenue and then north to Forty-second street to the station.

One of the amusing features of the start was the search for "Jack" Morris, the head of the field music, which consists of five and drum. Morris is a milkman and goes out on an early delivery. Messengers were sent for him. They got track of him at several times, but were always just behind him. Every little while Col. Morris would look in and ask: "Where is that man Morris? We must have music!"

Just before the regiment started Morris came into the armory parking. He got his mustangs together and the regiment will have music for the trip.

In the meantime the big armory looked like a warehouse.

Packing Up Groceries.

Hurry orders had been sent to a large grocery house for two days' rations. Boxes containing canned beef, ham and beans were piled up on the floor. There were packages of sugar, coffee and salt.

On the Fifteenth street side of the armory wagons were lined up to the curbstone and men carrying boxes and bundles were constantly entering.

The regiment was constantly being loaded. The first lot was lined with people. Inside the men stood in little groups, talking with friends and relatives. Pretty women—sweethearts, wives, sisters and mothers—stood here and there saying the last words before the departure.

Piled up in heaps was the camp equipment, and here and there were stacks of guns. But with all the apparent confusion in the place there was the best of order.

Soon after the men began to arrive arrangements were made with a restaurant near by and they were sent there in squads for breakfast. At 8 o'clock one hundred additional telegrams were sent out to the men who had not responded.

The Rev. Madison C. Peters, the chaplain of the regiment, was one of the first to arrive at the armory. He said it would not be practical for him to go with the soldiers today, but he promised to be with them tomorrow.

Alexander S. Williams, formerly of the Seventy-first Regiment, who was recently made captain of Company F of the Ninth, but who has not yet received his commission, said he would not wait for that, but would go with "the boys" anyway.

The sudden departure of the Ninth will interfere with some trials in the different courts of the city. One man had no notice Recorder staff that he could not appear in a case coming up to-day in General Sessions. There were several instances of this kind.

Nine passenger cars were used to transport the men, and two freight cars were required to carry camp equipment.

The officers of the regiment are: Colonel, William F. Morris; Majors, S. E. Japha and George F. Loring; Adjutant, Edward D. Graft; Quartermaster, Capt. D. B. Pratt; Commissary, John Ford; Surgeon, Major S. D. Hubbard; Assistant Surgeon, John B. L. Hume; Chaplain, Madison C. Peters.

NINTH MAY GO TO TROY LATER.

(Special to The Evening World.)
ALBANY, May 17.—At a conference of the military authorities to-day it will probably be decided to start cars to-morrow under the escort of troops over all the lines of the United Traction Company, including the lines in Troy, Albany, Watervliet, Cohoes and Tenssler.

It is the intention of the authorities to assign the Ninth Regiment to either Troy or Cohoes and move the Twenty-third, now guarding the main streets of Albany, to either of these towns to which the Ninth is sent.

The second Regiment, Tenth Battalion and Signal Corps will be left in Albany. Trouble is expected in Cohoes and South Troy, where the lawless element is sure to be.

NO COURT-MARTIAL FOR THE SOLDIERS.

It is really too bad. I am sorry that it had to occur. Both men took a sensible view of the thing before they died.

Neither blamed the militia. They said the soldiers were justified in firing on the crowd and that they should have kept off the streets during trouble. I hope the citizens will be more orderly to-day.

The men who were court-martialed of the men who did the shooting—Major-Gen. ROE's statement when told of the death of E. Leroy Smith, shot by soldiers.

EVENING WORLD'S FREE MESSAGES.

Messages passed to and fro to-day between the soldier boys of the Twenty-third Regiment at Albany and their loved ones in Brooklyn by The Evening World's free service that burdened its wires with anxiety and tender solicitation.

The guardsmen on strike duty at the capital availed themselves of the offer to transmit social and personal messages at The Evening World's expense, and these were filed in batches so large that the telegraph force at Albany felt the stress and had to be reinforced.

Brooklyn women all day sent the burden of their hopes, fears and wishes to sweethearts and husbands, and many a ray of sunshine was flashed into the heart of a militiaman while the situation was dark and gloomy.

The fact that the soldiers had found it necessary to fire into the mob and that the Ninth Regiment was also ordered to comply with the situation added to the serious aspect from a local point of view made the service of The Evening World doubly welcome and of increased efficacy to those left behind.

The haste with which the regiment was assembled led to the abrupt surrender of homesites, and many relatives and friends of the members were wondering what had become of their kin and comrades. To these The Evening World's free service proved a boon indeed.

NON-UNION MEN REACH ALBANY.

ALBANY, May 17.—Twenty-five non-union men, brought from New York to join the ranks of the strike breakers, were landing at the Quail street barn at 9:20 A. M. to-day.

They were landed from a New York Central train at a crossing near West Albany, and under guard of a battalion of the Twenty-third were marched six blocks to the city barn.

The movement was executed without the slightest trouble.
